

Letter of Introduction – Xavier Contreras

Xavier Contreras is a motivated and adaptable student with a growing interest in technology and service-oriented careers. Born on January 27, 2010, Xavier has demonstrated a strong sense of curiosity and a willingness to learn both inside and outside the classroom.

Throughout high school, Xavier has been involved in CTELL for two years, gaining exposure to collaborative environments and structured academic programs. In addition, he participated in basketball as a forward, where he developed teamwork, discipline, and communication skills.

Xavier has built a solid foundation in technical skills, including HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, along with experience using tools such as Git, GitHub, Photoshop, and Netlify. He types at approximately 31 words per minute and is comfortable using modern digital tools, including AI platforms like ChatGPT, to support learning and productivity. His interest in technology continues to grow, and he is considering pursuing a tech-related field in college or trade school.

Although Xavier has not yet had formal work or volunteer experience, he brings strong personal qualities that make him a valuable candidate for future opportunities. He describes himself as curious, helpful, and adaptable—traits that are reflected in his willingness to learn new skills and support others.

After graduation, Xavier is exploring several paths, including attending college for a technology major, pursuing technical training, joining the Coast Guard, or entering the workforce in areas such as boat-related work in San Francisco. His long-term goals include serving in the military, developing technical expertise, or working in a professional office environment.

With a GPA of 2.5, Xavier continues to work toward improving his academic performance while maintaining focus on his future goals. He is supported by teachers and mentors, including Coach Blake, Mr. Chagoyan, and Mrs. Lucero, who can speak to his character and potential.

Xavier Contreras is a student with determination and the ability to grow. With continued effort and guidance, he is well-positioned to succeed in whichever path he chooses.
